

ABSTRACT

A method for isolating a gene encoding a membrane-bound protein characterized by fusing a functional protein with a fused
5 protein itself, which differs from the existing TMT method in which an epitope recognized by an antibody is carried in a fused protein. This method enabled selective isolation of a gene encoding a membrane-bound protein.